JOB ANNOUNCEMENT

Senior Scientist

Salary Range:	Range 67 ($8,883-$11,913 per month) plus benefits
FLSA Classification:	Non Exempt
Bargaining Unit:	Non-Management

The Great Basin Unified Air Pollution Control District is seeking a Senior Scientist to lead scientific, technical, and research efforts related to Owens Lake and Mono Lake, and to manage projects and consultants. This is a full-time, in-person position based in Bishop, CA. The position serves the District in a leadership role; conducts, leads, and oversees professional research studies of dust control and issues of soils, geology, vegetation, and hydrology; reviews technical studies and reports; assists with the identification of dust source areas; and participates as a team member in the evaluation of dust control areas for compliance with performance criteria. The position oversees professional services contracts and projects requiring budgeting, project management, and oversight of consultants.

The work duties include office work as well as fieldwork, including leading and participating in data collection and field inspections. The position maintains databases and performs analyses of data. Successful performance requires the ability to work independently and as part of a team; to present to the Governing Board and other audiences; to represent the District in management, agency, and stakeholder meetings; to coordinate activities and establish positive working relationships internally and externally; to summarize scientific reports and review research proposals; and to prepare detailed technical reports.

The position requires a thorough knowledge of geology, hydrology, air quality, and general scientific principles and processes. Responsibilities include supervising professional services contracts, overseeing long-term field projects, overseeing the complex and varied functions of the research division, as well as coordinating activities internally and externally with other agencies, groups and local Tribes. The incumbent is accountable for accomplishing divisional planning, successful operations, and working toward District goals and objectives within general policy guidelines.
